Honors Lecture – 23674 – UH 101 - 002

Dive into the world of micro-memoirs, where brevity meets depth in the realm of nonfiction writing. In this course, you will explore the power of short, poignant narratives that capture the essence of personal experience in just a few hundred words. Through a combination of lectures, hands-on workshops, and peer feedback, you will learn how to distill complex emotions and experiences into compact, impactful stories.

Honors Forum - 23666 – UH 201 - 001

"Involve me, I understand." This Chinese proverb reminds us that in this life, experiences are important. This course has been designed to offer just that: experiences with music, theatre, art, film, and history. During the semester students will actively spend time experiencing these topics while also exploring these topics through a personal lens based on their major. Students from all disciplines across campus are encouraged to take this class. There are no prerequisites for taking this class.
